UNCLE WIGGLY AND LITTLE HOPPI.

Once upon a time, when Uncle Wiggly was on his way through the woods, looking for an adventure, and at the same time going to the live and seven-cent store to get a paper of hat pins for Nurse Jane Wuzzy, the rabbit gentleman heard some voices talking behind a lilypond bush. A lilypond bush, you know, is the bush off which the canny men get sticks on which they hang ice cream cones.

"Hum! I wonder who is talking here?" said Uncle Wiggly. "I had just taken a book for it may be some of the friends of mine who would nibble my mouse."

So the bunny rabbit gentleman listened again and he heard one voice say:

"Oh, but mother! I'm afraid!"

"Afraid of what, silly chap?" went on the second voice. "Don't you see we do it so easily? Why won't you try?"

"That doesn't sound very dangerous," thought Uncle Wiggly. "I'll take a look."

So he looked and he saw a mother hoptoad and her little boy on a lilypond bush. The mother toad was jumping around, but the little boy toad was quaking in a heap and keeping very still.

"Good morning, Mrs. Hopper Toad," said Uncle Wiggly. "What seems to be the trouble this morning?"

"Oh, I can't get little Hoppi to hop," said Mrs. Toad. "This is his first hoptoad lesson, but he's afraid even to take a tiny jump, though he sees me take big ones without getting hurt."

"What's the matter, Hoppi?" asked Uncle Wiggly. "Why don't you hop as your mother does?"

"Oh, 'cause I'm afraid if I do I'll come down so hard on the solid ground that I'll break my skin, or

"COSTUME TAILLEUR" IS DESIGN FROM PARIS

By CORA MOORE.

Designers of street costumes are providing us with a new thrill every other day or two, so while the "strictly tailored" suit is still highly approved of Fashion, it is difficult to resist the appeal of the gay, more fanciful models.

Here is one, for instance, a "costume tailleur," as the Paris designer calls it, that suggests alluring possibilities for making over an old suit. Emily Stevens wears it in "Footloose."

It is so simple that it hardly needs a description—just a straight, narrow skirt and a boxcoat with three-quarter sleeves that are practically the same width all the way down. Then, by the way of trimming, there is a wide, flat, black braid marked off by two narrow bands of dull gold braid.

With this suit, Miss Stevens wears a round turban that adds immeasurably to the general effectiveness of the ensemble. It consists of a square of the same drape of which the suit is made draped above a band composed of three heavy twisted cords.

What's in a Name?
By Mildred Marshall.

ALFREDA.

Alfreda belongs rightfully to fairyland. She originated in the delightful legends of the elf world, her most distinguished ancestor being the elf king, Elberich, whose counterpart Shakespeare marries to the Greek Titania in "A Midsummer Night's Dream." Alfreda means "elf council."

The first appearance of the name in England was in its masculine form: the most honored of all the English sovereigns wrote himself upon his jewel "Aelfred," which signified "elf in council" or supernatural being.

Though Alfreda may be properly regarded as the feminine of this name there are numerous other forms of this same elf title from which she may be taken. Aelfric was one of the most famous, having been bestowed upon the lady known to us as Elfrida, whose beauty was a fatal gift which brought ruin to her and her husband.

The opal is Alfreda's talismanic gem. Perhaps it is her heritage from elf-land which renders powerful the machinations of the fairy spirit which superstitious claims is imprisoned therein. Worn by her, the gem is said to guard her from evil and disease. Friday is her lucky day and 6 her lucky number. (Copyright, 1920, by Wheeler Syndicate, Inc.)

Canada's Housing Problem.

The housing problem in Montreal, Canada, reached its worst stage during May, when a dozen families had to be sent to the Meurling Refuge after all efforts to find houses, the rent of which they could pay, were unavailing. The families applied to the city hall and the city officials asked the Meurling Refuge to shelter the homeless ones temporarily at least.

Skin Eruptions Cause

Constant Torture

Acne, irritations and scalp eruptions, as well as all other forms of skin diseases, come from a disordered condition of the blood. They must be cured through the blood, and this explains why local treatment fails so absolutely.

The radical and rational treatment is to take a thorough course of S. S. S., the purely vegetable blood remedy, which thoroughly cleanses the blood of every particle of impurity. A few bottles of S. S. S. will root out the disease germs from your blood, your complexion will begin to clear up and you will soon be rid of the disease as thousands of others have.

The Marriage Mail

By Mildred K. Barbour.

VI—NEIGHBORLY PRIVILEGE.

The shrilling of the telephone on the stand outside the breakfast room door drove the lovers apart.

When Mrs. Atherton's trim maid entered from the kitchen, both bride and bridegroom were occupied with toasted rolls.

"I'm not at home, Blanche, if the call is for me," said Allison, "but mother will take it on the extension in her room. I don't want to talk to anyone yet," she explained to her young husband, "but I dare say the phone will be ringing all day."

Mrs. Atherton, anticipating a few early calls by the uncontrollably curious, was already descending the stairs, clad in a morning gown that befit a new mother-in-law.

"Good morning, children," she called benignly, taking the receiver from the maid's hand. "Is the coffee in the urn still hot? I'll have a cup with you in a minute."

"Yes," she spoke into the transmitter with a musical upward inflection. "Oh, how do you do, Mrs. Gibson. . . . Really? . . . No, scarcely a surprise to me, but a little premature. I had rather planned on August—the flowers for the wedding are so pretty then. . . . Did I know? Oh, but my dear, of course! Allison tells me everything. . . . Very pleased indeed. He is such a dear boy, really. . . . Oh yes, they are both with me for the present. . . . My dear, don't mention it! I dread the thought of being parted from my daughter even by the width of a street. . . . Thank you, I'll tell them. You must drop in for tea, Allison will be so glad. Good-bye."

"Hear mother bluffing," whispered Allison to her young husband. "It's a darn good bluff too," he had whispered back. "I'll bet she hates me."

"Oh no, dear, she just hates loving me. She adores you, really."

He smiled but there was a humorous twinkle in his gray eyes when he sprang up to set a chair for his mother-in-law.

She held out a graceful hand, raising a cool cheek significantly. "I dare say you better get used to it," she murmured as he dutifully

THE HEAD NURSE SAYS:
NO STARCH FOR BABY.

As the wee one begins to show signs of wanting something, other than his regular diet of milk, the average mother turns to crackers or bread crust as his first solid food. The fact that a baby's first teeth are his "meat" teeth should indicate that for the first years proteins in the form of milk and meat are what nature intended. A carefully selected bone with a little flesh on it can be given the ten-month-old child. He will chew out the juices and it will do him no harm.

A spoonful of orange juice should be given once a day to the child of that age but starches should be withheld until the grinding teeth appear. Many of the patent foods for children are made with starch as a basis and sweetened to make them attractive. The babies apparently thrive, but at years of age the starch-fed child cannot compete with the baby who has been fed on mother's milk or on cow's milk modified according to a formula which the family physician or a child specialist will write according to the age of the baby.

Children need sugar as they burn up energy more continuously than grown-ups, so the simple desserts such as custard, junket and gelatin may be given even before bread and milk is given. Dr. Holt's book on child feeding should form the cornerstone for every young mother's library.

All States Join

In Celebrating

Suffrage Victory

Auditorium, San Francisco, July 2.—A fifteen-minute suffrage demonstration, probably the biggest in the history of national conventions, marked the reading of the suffrage plank in the Democratic platform today by Chairman Glass of the resolutions committee.

Every State standard joined the march around the aisles. The band played incessantly in double time. The men joined in the cheering but women's soprano voices filled the air with a shrill overtone of sound, the like of which was not heard during the "shows" staged for the candidates when they were put in nomination before the convention.

fully implanted a kiss on its well-managed surface.

"It's a privilege," he returned promptly, wondering absently if that sunken line could ever have been a dimple like Allison's.

The telephone rang again imperiously.

"You wicked children have upset Maplewood's morning," smiled Mrs. Atherton complacently, as she returned to the instrument.

I say, "let's duck," suggested Osborne. "This sort of thing is going to keep up all day."

"But your family is coming to call and mother asked me to be here at tea especially."

"Oh, damn families!" muttered the bridegroom. "I want you all to myself for a while."

NEW DIVISION STARTS WORK

Branch of Navigation Bureau Gives Positions to 150 Jobless.

Giving employment to 150 clerks who would otherwise be jobless, following the wholesale dismissals of the last few weeks, the new research division of the Bureau of Navigation opened July 1, under direction of Lieut. Comdr. C. B. Hatch, U. S. N.

This division will furnish complete war records of all naval personnel to the adjutants general of the States, territories and insular possessions of the United States. For this work, $200,000 was appropriated at the last session of Congress, supplemented by $100,000 diverted from another appropriation.

Approximately a dozen applications for pensions have been received from employees in outlying yards. Chief Clerk F. S. Curtis stated yesterday that these will await the return of the Secretary for decision. Requests for retention have also been received from four more employees coming within the provisions of the retirement act. These are in addition to the forty-seven cases already pending, in which two decisions in favor of retention are expected.

Daily Horoscope

This is not a fortunate day, according to astrology. Mercury and Neptune are in evil place, the planetary influences being especially unfavorable.

It is not a lucky day for journeys, accidents and disappointments being foreshadowed.

While Neptune is in an aspect boding ill for ocean travel, there is also a sign read as threatening for railways.

Mercury gives warning of libel suits and the publication of news that is of slanderous intent. Care should be taken to watch both the spoken and the written word while this configuration prevails.

Letters should be penned with caution, for there will be more than one expose of correspondence that will cause heartache, resentment and even retaliation.

Persons who earn their livings as writers may meet with disappointments at this time, owing to some unforeseen and extraordinary circumstance.

Resorts of every type that offer surcease of city conditions should be frequented exceedingly during the next three weeks.

Landlords and proprietors of hotels are subject to many cares and anxieties. They will make much money, but at great sacrifice of personal convenience.

Some movement toward the simple life appears to be foreshadowed and the autumn may bring a campaign of peculiar significance to persons of all vocations.

At least two great plays are prophesied for next season when a woman star of exceptional talents will be introduced to the public.

An autumn of unusual gaiety is prognosticated for Washington, D. C., and Chicago, Ill.

Differences in wage standards may be apparent before this configuration wanes. Women, however, will be more fortunate than men.

Persons whose birthdate it is should avoid pleasure that diverts from business affairs. A year of stress seems to be indicated, but it may be made very profitable.

Children born on this day may be fond of science and unusually studious. Those subjects of Cancer may have such vivid imaginations that they seem at times untruthful.

STREET CAR STRIKE

TIES UP NEW ORLEANS

New Orleans, July 2.—New Orleans' street car service was paralyzed today by strike of conductors, motormen and shopmen last night.

Word was received early today that Maj. Gen. Edward M. Lewis, commander of Camp Pike, accompanied by his staff, was en route to New Orleans to take command of United States troops guarding street railway property.

The men demanded 85 cents an hour. The company insisted that in order to meet the demands a 5-cent fare would be necessary. The present fare of 6 cents was put into effect last year.
